An illustrative example of how review observations, priority levels, and recommended actions may be organized.

Important note

This sample is fictional and provided for demonstration only. It is not a review of any real organization, does not assess legal or regulatory compliance, and is not legal advice. Findings in an actual engagement depend on the agreed scope, applicable requirements, and workplace context.

01 / Executive summary

A review report can summarize the documents examined, the boundaries of the review, key observations, and suggested next steps. The examples below are hypothetical and demonstrate format only.

PRIORITY	ILLUSTRATIVE OBSERVATION	EXAMPLE ACTION
High	A procedure refers to a role that is not clearly defined elsewhere in the reviewed documents.	Confirm role ownership and align terminology across related documents.
Medium	Two documents appear to describe the same reporting step using different wording.	Reconcile wording and identify the authoritative procedure.
Low	Document control details are not presented consistently in the sample set.	Consider a common version, approval, and review-date format.

02 / Suggested report structure

Scope and limitations

List the documents reviewed, exclusions, assumptions, and any standards or requirements agreed for consideration.

Summary of observations

Present concise, evidence-based observations with document references where appropriate.

Prioritized recommendations

Describe the suggested action, rationale, proposed owner, and target timing where agreed.

Follow-up and closure

Record management decisions, assigned actions, and how completion will be tracked.

Scope reminder

A policy review is only one input to a broader safety management system. It does not replace site inspections, worker consultation, training, hazard assessment, legal advice, or other duties that may apply to an organization.
